To Whom It May Concern:

Summer camps have proven themselves invaluable in bringing together a cross section of children from all walks of life from Jamaica and the USA. It creates a wonderful opportunity for the sharing of values, the learning of social and technical skills, and establishing bonds of friendship between distant communities, which can last for a lifetime.

The Swamp Corp will be hosting such a camp for the second time in Jamaica in July of this year. Last year, the camp hosted over 80 Jamaican and 30 American youths, and was conducted by experienced camp directors. The camp sought to instill moral and Christian values, and taught discipline, team work, and social responsibility. The response from the participants was overwhelmingly positive.

Such camps can have constructive results in the lives of many youths. I am optimistic about the success of the camp and endorse its concept and intention.

Yours truly,
